SIR ROBERT COLLINS.

Letter from Jo: Collins to his son Charles, 1682.

Charles,

I am sorry to hear you should have soe little discretion to run your self into such danger, as to goe to Abington, & especially at such a time, I shall say nothing of y^r^ behaviour there, but advise you to leave off such frolicks, you wrote to me, y^t^ it would be unhandsom for one of your quality not to have money in y^r^ pockett, I should account my self indiscreet to enter you a gentleman, and not to maintain you there accordingly, but let me advize you in this acording to the proverb, to cut your coat according to y^r^ cloth, tis true you are placed in the same ranck with Gents: but you must know yt there is a great difference in the estate of Gents: there be som tis probable yt you may bee in company with, yt have ten times more estate than I have, or ever you will have, and therefore must not thinck to spend with them, & truly I must stretch hard to maintaine you in this quality, & therefore pray be frugall & discreet as you can, & come as seldome amongst them as you can possibly come off with creditt, & by Gods blessing you shall not want to maintain you in yt equipage, with good husbandry, & following your study will prevent the spending of mony, besides the advantage yt will accrue to you during your life. I received a letter from a Gent: this last week, w^ch^ was of y^r^ quality & newly come from Oxon, in w^ch^ was scarse a word of Ortography, but I hope better things of you. I have here inclosed sent you my coat of arms, w^ch^ you may place up in y^r^ study, & because you may be able to blazon it, for there be many yt cannott, w^ch^ seems rediculous, & because I suppose you have but little scill in it, I will do it for y^r^ knowledge, w^ch^ is, vert, a Gryphon passant, or, a cheif ermin, the Crest is a Gryphons head, erased, vert, crowned or, & because to many arms there is a misticall meaning, I will likewise declare it to you, once for all, & I desire you not to forgett it; The field vert, signifys husbandry, the Gryphon, in Authors, is an emblem of watchfullness, his being passant signifys diligence & industry, his colour, or, denotes riches, the cheif, ermin, signifys honour in cheif, w^ch^ put together resolves into this, yt, by diligence and industry in our calling, we attain to riches, the foundation & way to honour, where note the Gryphon is not rampant, as whereby a man should attain to riches & honour, by rapacity & ambition, but by honesty & humility, all w^ch^ is aptly expressed in this Motto; p [per] Callem, Collem, such Motto's belonging to arms not only expressing the mystery of them, but alluding to the name of the person yt beard them, soe one D^r^ Collins, a famous Cambridge man, took for his motto, Colens Deum et Regem, now look into your Roman history & there you shall find a great & noble family of the Collini, w^ch^ took theyr name a porta Collina, & the gate soe called, because it led in Collem, soe yt, as I s^d^ before, their Motto, per Callem, Collem, takes in the mystery of the Coat, as much as to say, per virtutis callem, honoris collem ascendimus, w^ch^ yt you may attain to, to live vertuously att the beginning, yt you may gain reputation hereafter, or rather, yt you may pray to God to give you sanctified vertue here, w^ch^ is Grace, yt you may attain ever lasting glory, is not only the advice, but the prayer of, y^r^ loving father, Jo: Collins.

Imprimis venerare Deum.
